

BORING, AERIAL ROUTES AND HANDOVER

A bore can strike a utility line.

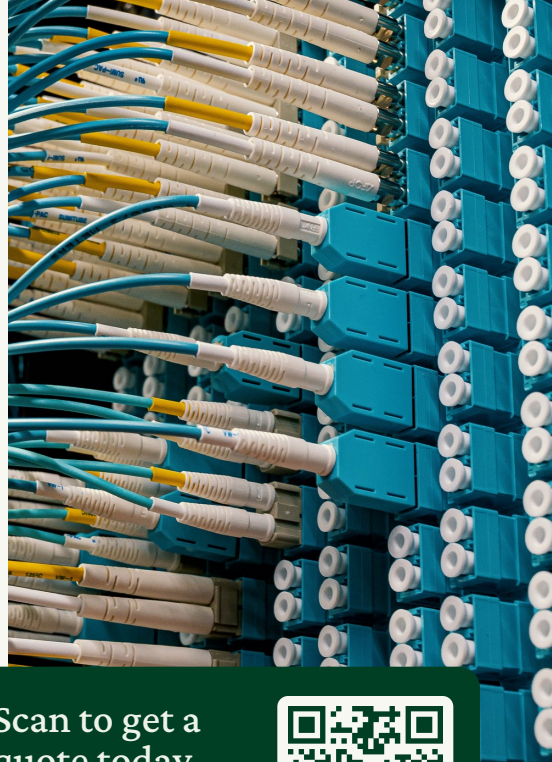

You trench, bore or place aerial fiber routes. Accepted utility-work and linear-project terms should follow testing and partial handover, with crew injuries, rigs and unfinished materials kept distinct.

RISKS WORTH DISCUSSING

- 01 Utility-line strikes during boring work
- 02 Trench or aerial-work employee injuries
- 03 Storm damage to unfinished route materials

Scan to get a quote today

Or call
800-777-1872

Coverage worth discussing

General liability

Resulting harm under accepted utility/construction terms.

Inland marine

Insured scheduled bore rigs and field tools.

Workers compensation

Work-injury benefits for eligible field/trench employees.

Builders risk

Accepted linear-route works before agreed handover.

Coverage is subject to policy terms and exclusions.

Why The Southern Agency

01 Listen

We review your operations, coverage and past claims.

02 Assess

We look at hazards and ways to reduce risk.

03 Build

We compare carriers, premiums and audit terms.

04 Support

We revisit coverage as your work changes.

SCAN TO

Read the full guide

800-777-1872

TheSouthernAgency.com